School committee looks into possible resolutions to stalemate

The Wilmington School Committee, August 3, took the first step toward resolving the stalemate in the selection of a high school principal.

The committee voted unanimously on member Anthony Accardi's motion to direct Superintendent Dr. Carol Sager to "offer for discussion other suitable alternatives to provide for the daily tasks of Wilmington High School, which may include, but not be exclusive to, a temporary principal."

Chairman Bob Peterson explained that the board called this meeting to cut a week off the process. Originally, there was only a meeting scheduled for August 10, and instead f waiting until then to discuss other alternatives to eliminating the deadlock, the committee wanted to meet August 3. This way, they can vote on Dr. Sager's recommendations on August 10, rather than August 17, as initially planned.

Discussion between the public and the board became heated when committee member Bridget Zukas said that Wilmington High School was unique and has particular problems that require a particular principal. Anne Linehan asked Zukas what makes W.H.S. so different from other high schools.

Zukas cited several problems prevailing at W.H.S., including a crowded cafeteria, low teacher and student morale, as well as a bathroom three doors down from the principal's office that could not be controlled by the high school administration.

Linehan retorted that many other high schools have crowded cafeterias and low teacher - student morale, and again asked what makes W.H.S. so unique.

"I can not discuss the uniqueness of this school," Zukas replied, without mentioning a former (person), and I'm not prepared to do that."

Zukas had mentioned, however, that the problems at Wilmington High School could only be resolved by a strong building manager. Linehan then accused her of trying to limit the education of the students there by prefering a building manager over an instructional leader. Zukas explained that a building manager does not mean the person is not also an educational leader. A manager, she said, would be someone who could deal with all problems that may arise at the high school, someone who would not always tell the teachers that they are the problem, but would be willing to work with them to resolve their problems.

John Brooks said he would be willing to consider hiring an acting principal as long as he "could be assured that the search for a permanent principal will not be interrupted." Accardi added, however, that hiring a temporary principal is only one alternative to be considered.

One resident asked the school committee to consider itself an advisory council, but Brooks interjected with "the advisory role is that of the superintendent. The authority to elect a principal or any other employee of the school department rests exclusively in the hands of the school committee, and it was only a few years ago that the superintendent was given the power to recommend, and with good reasons." Brooks added that this is the first time in his 16 years on the school committee that such a stalemate has ever developed.

The board members said they have spent long hours meeting with Dr. Sager to discuss how this deadlock could be resolved and hope to reach a compromise soon.

Protests, but no arrests

Protesters of nuclear weapons demonstrated in front of the Avco plant in Wilmington on Tuesday morning, the 38th anniversary of the bombing of Nagasaki. Police made no arrests, but did move several persons back to the curb on the driveway. Below, several protesters join hands in prayer. Similar protests have taken place every Tuesday for several months. Last month, police arrested several protesters who gained access to the property and caused damage.

Water commissioners balk at paying for full paving

Water Commissioner Arthur Smith of Wilmington may sign the specifications being prepared for the installation of new water mains in Hathaway Acres. Then again, he may not sign.

Smith was very unhappy, on August 4 when he read the specifications for the proposed contract. The contract calls for 8400 feet of six inch pipe to be laid in the streets this fall, as far as and including Gunderson Road, with a hydrant at the end of every road. The road cuts will be paved with a winter patch, and then repaved in the spring.

Smith had no trouble about that.

But he objected strongly when, in the section for the repaving, it said the water commissioners would repave the streets, completely.

That, Smith said, means using 2,000 tons of paving! That would cost $100,000 and it would all come out of the water rates.

"I'm not going to sign it!"

"Bob Palmer (highway superintendent, ed.) is going to get two miles of paved road and it is not going to come out of his budget! One hundred thousand dollars for the overlay, plus $30,000 - $40,000 for the patch! I'm not going to sign!"

The figures he was citing would also include the work for Oakridge Circle and Marcus Road. A special town meeting voted the water mains, but not the entire paving of the street, Smith maintains.

The money that is collected from the sale of the water, by the water and sewer department, is supposed to be used solely for the operation of that department. Smith feels that each department should stay within its budget, and he said so. He is not in favor of water users paying for the highway department expenses.

There was another item, in the meeting htat night, on which Smith spoke. It can be called "Buy American." That slogan is to go into the specifications for the new water mains for Hathaway Acres and off Gowing Road.

Mr. Smith recalled another street in Wilmington in which the water main was installed by a private contractor for a real estate development. The valves that were used, it turned out later, were said to be "just as good." They had been made in Japan.

Since that street was completed the Wilmignton Water and Sewer Department has had to dig up every one of those valves and replace them with valves made in the United States.

It was not patriotism on Smith's part. He was not waving the flag. He just wants to have trouble - proof water mains in Wimington.

Planning board defends official map concept

The Wilmington Planning Board is preparing to defend the idea of an Official Map. A discussion is being prepared, for the next selectmen's meeting, which will probably be on August 22.

The meeting with the selectmen is to discuss the Marion Street controversy, about which former selectman Dan Gillis is causing a controversy.

Members of the board pointed out to each other then there are other streets in Wilmington which have blank portions of the street, unaccepted. One such street, they said, was Roosevelt Road, which has two constructed ends, and woodland between them.

The board is agreed that the official map is the single most important legislation for Wilmington in the past 10 years. The official map was adopted in town meeting June 25, 1973.

The second most important, most needed legislation, they agree, was the designation of the Wilmington Board of Appeals as the permit granting authority. This occured in the town meeting of March 12, 1977.

During those four years the selectmen were the permit granting authority. As the result of the two votes on the town meeting and the "infinite wisdom" of the board of appeals the original intentions of the planning board in preparing the official map are now being realized. The vote has brought order to the development of paper streets, and has conserved and promoted the general welfare of the town.

The members pointed out that, unless there is a way on the official map, or there is an approved subdivision, no public water supply lines may be constructed, no sewer may be installed, no other municipal utility or improvements be constructed. No person may open a way for public use unless it is shown on the official map or is under subdivision control.

The planning board is prepared to tell the selectmen that it supports the concept of adequate roads, capable of supporting the utilities and vehicular traffic for the entire frontage of any buildable lot, and that anything less is unacceptable.

Town Engineer Bob Higgins told the board that he had analyzed, some time ago, the relative proportions of people who appear before the board of appeals, for official map hearings.

Regular builders, he said, are in favor. They have found that they can sell homes more easily when the street is regularly constructed.

And, Higgins added, the fact that there are only three or four municipalities in Massachusetts with an official map is no excuse. Many towns without an official map now require any home construction to adhere to such standards. Higgins named Lexington and Tewksbury as two such towns.

Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes

Dawn Manni and John Holmes are wed

Dawn Marie Manni, daughter of Ruth and Victor Manni of Edwards Road, Wilmington became the bride of John Vincent Holmes, III, son of John and Dianna Holmes of Benson Road on July 24. Father Victor Lavoie performed the mid-afternoon ceremony before the altar of st. Thomas Church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a draped waist gown of all over silk face lace. The open neck bodice featured leg-o-mutton, fol the shoulder sleeves and Venice lace. Her full chapel train was encircled by bands of Venice flowers. For her headpiece the bride chose a veil of silk illusion falling from a wreath of imported silk flowers and seed pearls. She carried a nosebay bouquet of white roses and babies breath.

Kelly Duggan of Wilmington served as maid of honor while the bride's attendants included Susan Tyner, Michelle Reid, Janet Kerrigan, Jackie Holmes and Phyllis Martell.

Paul Dione of Medford acted as best man while ushering duties were in charge of David Bruno, Russell Brookes, Mark Tracy, Michael Manni and Jim Holmes.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at Elks Hall in Woburn.

The new Mrs. Holmes is a 1981 graduate of Wilmington High School currently employed as a data technician by Dynamics Research, Wilmington. She will be living at home until her husband finishes a one-year tour of duty in Korea.

Her husband is also a 1981 graduate of Wilmington High School, currently serving with the U.S. Army at Ft. Riley, Kansas.

Talkline eliminates one phone line

The Choate Talkline, a telephone crisis intervention hotline sponsored by Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., announced that as of September 1, use of the telephone number 663-8114 will be terminated. However, 24 hour, confidential service will still be available by calling the Greater Boston area number 935-1187. Unfortunately, for the Lowell - Billerica - Tewksbury area residents, telephoning the Talkline will now be a toll call.

James Fereira, Talkline coodinator, said that this is being done because the amount of calls coming in on the 663-8114 number did not justify the cost of the extra telephone service.

Gustus named acting chief at Middlesex County Hospital

William Gustus of 161 Burlington Ave., Wilmington, has been appointed interim chief of the Middlesex County Hospital in Waltham. He was appointed over a week ago by the Middlesex County Commissioners. The job pays $45,000 a year.

According to the Reading Chronicle, it appears that another man may accept the full time appointment to the job. Eugene C. Arnold of Ithaca, New York, was recently the administration chief of the Hamad General Hospital, in Doha, Qatar, in the Persian Gulf. Arnold, for several weeks has not responded to the commissioners' job offer.

Two weeks ago the commissioners, on a 2-1 vote, appointed Gustus to the position for a three month period. The vote was by commissioners Thomas Larkin and Michael McLaughlin. McLaughlin had proposed that Gustus be appointed to the position permanently.

Since then Arnold had contacted Larkin and renewed his interest in the directorship. Larkin was reported as saying, last Thursday, that Arnold had not responded to the job because he "was a little fuzzy," according to the Chronicle, about the hiring procedure.

Larkin and Commissioner Bill Schmidt would like to consummate a contract with Arnold soon. Arnold is expected to be meeting with the commissioners individually, this week, and Commissioner Larkin has been quoted as saying that he has no objection to having Gustus hold the position for a three month period.

Gustus is the county policy manager for the commissioners of Middlesex County, a position which has held since last February. He is in charge of day - to - day administration and he likens the position to that of a town manager.

But, for the past five months he has been the acting fiscal affairs director of the county hospital. There has been no one since that date acting as county policy manager.

Commissioner McLaughlin had originally voted against Arnold's nomination, and had nominated Frederick Boss, former director of the Hale Hospital in Haverhill. Boss was the only other finalist interviewed by the commissioners. McLaughlin, however, could not get a second vote to appoint Boss.

Gustus has indicated that he may apply for the director's job on a permanent basis. This, however, was before Arnold renewed his interest in the position.

Spotlighters to hold auditions workshop

When a person's mouth is so dry they cannot swallow; breathing is shallow and raspy; the hands - palms damp - tremble as a page is turned; the knees knock; voice quavers, and the heart is hammering in their ears; the diagnosis is an acute case of "audition nerves." The Silver Lake Spotlighters have a cure!

The Spotlighters community theatre will offer a "How to Audition" workshop to help those interested learn how to overcome audition nerves, demonstrate potential, and give a good audition.

"No director likes to watch a bad audition," said Celia Bartolotti, president of the Spotlighters and one of the workshop leaders. "In fact, most directors want you to be good, but often actors ruin their chances for a part by not knowing how to prepare or understanding how to handle themselves once they're in an audition situation."

The "How to Audition" workshop will be held Wednesday, August 24 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the United Methodist Church, 87 Church St., Wilmington, and will be led by a panel of experienced directors and performers. It will feature timely and practical suggestions on metal and physical preparation, how to control nervousness and make the most of an audition, as well as information on what a director looks for in an audition.

Besides Bartolotti, who is a well known director in this area and former teacher, workshop leaders will include: Lauren Cochran and Mary Sheehan, popular, local community theatre actresses with extensive experience in muscial comedy; James Grana, talented director and actor with the Arlington Friends of the Drama; Kelley O'Leary, who will direct the Spotlighters' fall production of Grase and who has directed community and university theatre in the mid-west and Boston; and Suzanne Fall, a multi-talented actress whose experience includes summer stock and extensive community theatre work.

The audition workshop is open to everyone - free to Spotlighter members; a nominal fee of $3.00 will be charged non-members.

To register for the August 24 "How to Audition" workshop, call Janice Rudnicki at 657-7278 in Wilmington.

Wilmington Community Schools announces fall enrichment programs

Wilmington Community Schools, Inc., a non-profit independent organizaiton offers its "Autumn Self Enrichment Sessions."

Besides many adult courses there are new courses specifically designed for young people. Basic drawing for young people will be held Monday evenings and basic guitar for ages 9 through 13 will be held Tuesday afternoons.

A sign language course should be of interest to old and young alike.

Many new courses have been added to the lineup. A few of these are crochet and knitting, geneology, photography intermediate, needle-art, self esteem, computer concepts, understanding human behavior, woodcarving and a GED test preparation course. This course is for those people who did not complete high school and would now like to prepare for the five part, general equivalency diploma exam.

There are several new courses which are tentatively on schedule. Automotive, furniture refinishing, parenting and how to set up a small business.

Naturally courses that have been in demand in the past are again a part of the fall lineup. Woodworking, shorthand, computer basic, rug braiding, tole and decorative painting, potery, patchwork quilting, basic guitar, typing beginners II, business machines, cake decorating, money management and floral designs.

Several of the regular courses have new instructors this semester - bookkeeping, craft sampling, oil and acrylic painting and typing I are among them.

As usual WCS will offer the popular mini courses. These courses range in length from one to six weeks. Scheduled for this semester are microwave cooking, securities and investments, they mystique and the awesome telephone and wallpapering clinic.

Back by popular demand is the bus trip to the famous factory outlets of New Bedford and Fall River. This trip is scheduled for November 5, just in time for Christmas shopping. Those who attended the last all day shopping excursion to these outlets in March can attest to the fantastic savings available on such names as Lee jeans, Kay Windsor dresses, Vanity Fair and Warner underwear and nightclothes, bedspreads, towels, designer clothes, shoes and much more. Not only will there be savings, but it will be fun. Transportation will again be by luxury Trailways motorcoach.

Board members encouraged Fay to apply for WHS principal

by Debbi Michals

One of the candidates for Wilmington High School principal said recently that he had the backing of at least two school committee members in his bid for this position. Bill Fay, principal of the West Intermediate School, explained that although neither of these board members indicated that they would cast a final vote for him, he had been encouraged by some board members to apply for the job.

Fay would not identify which committee members had suggested that he apply for the principalship. Committeewoman Brigit Zukas did say, however, that she had indicated to the rest of the committee that she found Fay to be "an attractive candidate" before he was called in for an interview. Phil Fenton has also said that he had been biased toward Fay throughout the process, but he did not make a final decision on a candidate until after the interviews were conducted.

Fay's obvious committee support has stirred up quite a bit of controversy. Some people have alleged that he told another candidate, Dr. Joseph Connelly, principal of the North Intermediate School, not to apply for the job because he (Fay) already had most of the committee votes sewn up.

Dr. Connelly, after hesitating for a moment, said that none of the candidates had ever said any of these things to him. Fay did admit, however, that he approached Connelly, to whom he indicated he intended to apply for the position and that he had been encouraged to apply by some board members. Fay also said that he considers Connelly to be a good friend, but, he added, "Who was I to tell someone not to apply? As a matter of fact, the application deadline was on a Friday, and Dr. Connelly called me on Thursday to tell me that he was going to apply so that there would be no misunderstandings, and I told him he had a right to apply."

Although Connelly said no other candidate had told him not to apply for the principal's job, one board member said he or she was disappointed that he applied because this person feared the current controversy would result if both intermediate principals applied for the position.

Another accusation leveled at board members is that they support Bill Fay's candidacy because of their relationships with him or to repay a favor. The only member of the present school committee that has indicated any specific ties to Fay is John Brooks.

"Oh sure, we're friends," Brooks explained, "but that doesn't in any way enter into my decision because the first time Bill applied for a principalship, I was the deciding vote, and I voted against him." Fay served on the school committee with Brooks from 1968 until 1970, when he resigned to apply for the principalship of the Glen Road School. Both men are also Rotary Club members.

Fay said he did not know any of the other committee members until after they were elected, though Zukas said she had worked with him at the West Intermediate School on a part time basis prior to joining the committee.

As for committee members pledging their allegiance to Fay in repayment for past favors, Fay replied, "I can't for the life of me figure out what that could be. I can't figure out what I could do for them that would make them support me. The only thing I could do for them would be to support them in their election, and I've never done that for any one of them."

Bill Fay doesn't deny his popularity in Wilmington and admits that his support of any candidate in upcoming elections "would have a bearing to a degree."

How much weight Fay pulls in town has been debated, though no one, including Fay himself, would deny it can be quite extensive. He said he would expect to be faced with more accusations about his connections with the selectmen rather than the school committee since he knows, has supported, or is friends with most of the selectmen.

The debate about Fay's political clout here doesn't stop with the supportive and occasionally threatening phone calls school committee members and doctor Sager have received from various persons. According to Nancy Clark, who replaced Fay on the school committee when he resigned to apply for the Glen Road principalship, she was subject to a myriad of phone calls and some harrassment all geared to encourage her support of Fay for that post. There were threats at that time, too, she said, like those that current board members have cited, that she would not be re-elected to the committee if she did not vote for Fay. Clark also said that Fay's long-standing ties with many of the towns top politicians have given him a political edge at times.

Fay, however, said he never asked anyone to make any phone calls to the school board members, and added, "I did not call any one of those school committee members and ask them for their vote. I can not control what parents do."

Whether or not Fay's political ties can or should be an issue is hotly debated. Zukas said his sociability or the fact that he grew up in town and knows many people here should not be held against him. People should look beyond all that, she said, to see his qualifications, such as how he brought about much needed changes at the West Intermediate School when he took over there. She also denied accusations that she is standing by Fay because of her hopes that she will get his support in the upcoming election.

Fay's work at the West Intermediate School has also been a topic of discussion recently. It is a fact that Fay made many changes at that school when he left the North Intermediate School to become principal at the West. His work there did change the atmosphere of that school to a more disciplined, controlled facility.

Linda McMenimen and former school committee member Jim Demos said the problem at that school was not necessarily as serious as it has been described by various residents and that there are other aspects of the issue to consider. Many of the children who attended the West, for example, came from the Shawsheen School where discipline had been poor until the principal there eventually resigned while the committee was researching the situation, McMenimen said. Fay's work at turning the "Wild, Wild West" around has been commendable, both McMenimen and Demos agreed.

"Anybody who had any kind of administrative ability with the support of the superintendent and the school committee and the other services in town, such as the police department, could have handled that problem," Demos said. One of the issues involved with the troubles at the West Intermediate School, he added, was that the administration in that building did not receive any support from the school department.

There are other issues involved in "how the West was won," however. Some people question whether Fay solved the problem there, or just simply eliminated it. Several teachers, for example, who had worked with him at the North requested transfers to the West when Fay moved there. He also asked that several teachers who he felt he could never agree with philosophically be transferred to another school, he said. And at least two children who had been severe disciplinary problems were expelled.

No one can take away from Fay's accomplishments, however, the fact that the reputation of the West Intermediate School did change completely sometime after he took over. He attributes this, as many other people including board members have, to his strong disciplinary procedures. Kids don't respect an administrator's reputation, he said, until they see him in action, however.

Dr. Connelly said that he considers "discipline to be (his) strong suit, too." Since Proposition 2½ came in, he explained, the intermediate schools have been without an assistant principal, which put additional pressure on the administrators.

Rumors have also been circulating that Dr. Sager will not recommend Fay for the prinipal's position due to a personality conflict that may exist between the two. Sager has admitted that she and Fay have disagreed philosphically in the past, and McMenimen has said it would be fair to say that Dr. Sager has indicated that she would not be able to work with him as high school principal. Fay, however, said he has "always had an excellent relationship with the superintendent and the school committee."

Fay said he believes Sager is happy with him as an intermediate school principal and feels he is most valuable to the community in his current capacity. Sager has stated that she is satisfied with him as West Intermediate School principal. Fay also said, "You have to admire her steadfastness. There aren't too many people that would fly in the face of school committee resistance."

As for any conflicts or confrontations that may have occured between Sager and Connelly in the past, both said they have differed professionally on occasion, but that their differences rested only with the issue. Once the issue had been resolved, the matter was dropped, they said.

The committee and Dr. Sager will be working on a compromise or a temporary solution to the problem on August 10 at 7:30 in the high school auditorium. The most widely discussed prospect has been hiring a temporary or acting principal to handle the necessary functions of running that school until a permanent principal has been hired. Both Sager's choices, Dr. Connelly and David Sweeney from Foxboro High School, as well as Bill Fay, have indicated that they would be willing to accept the position on an acting basis. Sweeney could not be reached for comment, but both Connelly and Fay said they were confident that once they got into the job, their work would speak for itself. Neither man worried about risking the tenure they each currently hold.

"Tenure has never been a concern to me," Fay said. "If you do a good job, you don't have to worry about tenure."

Other subjects that have been mentioned by some people as concerns or reservations about Fay's candidacy have to do with his membership in the Rotary Club and the fact that he is a partner is a travel agency. Fay said his weekly lunches at the Rotary Club are probably the only times he eats lunch. As for his business ventures, he said he is a one third partner in an Andover travel agency, but basically only on paper. He has not actively participated in that business at any time.

Elaine Hachey of Dunmore Road, Wilmington has been named as the state appointee to the Wilmington Housing Authority. A member of the Democratic Town Committee, she replaces Melvin Keough on the authority.

Unhappy with sewer work

Daniel Canada, 55 Florence Ave., South Tewksbury found that he was among friends when he visited the Tewksbury Conservation Commission (concom) on July 19.

He told the concom he had bought his home in 1981 and had ideas of landscaping the backyard. But then sewer construction workmen showed up to start work on the town's main trunk line.

Canada displayed pictures to the members of the concom showing what followed. He also told how "they ran hoses through my yard and ruined the backyard and front yard and the fence."

There was a promise, he said, that his property would be fixed up. But he added that the contractor just put down one half inch of loam around the yard and then departed.

When Canada started to fix up his residence, he was told by other persons that he needed to get permission from the conservation commission. That was the reason for his visit. He has never had any water on the property, except when the contractor was constructing the pump house.

Secondly, Canada was told he should have a talk with town engineer Bill Burris, or DPW Supt. Phil Pattison. That property should be repaired by the contractor, he was told, and Burris or Pattison should know about it. If necessary, Canada should see one of the selectmen as a sort of last resort. His place should be fixed up and at no cost to him.

Ham radios - a hobby that saves lives

by Debbi Michals

To some it is a game, to others a hobby, but to the thousands of people helped in emergencies, amateur radio is a lifesaver.

Amateur or ham radio, as it has been labeled, has been around since the early 1900's. It not only gives the operator a chance to communicate with people locally and across the world, but it is also designed to help in disaster and emergency situations. Several communities, for example, have etablished a network of hams who use their radios to report accidents on local highways and streets. Ham radio operators also provided the only means of communication to victims of the 1976 Guatamala earthquake, the 1977 Johnstown flood, and the 1980 eruption of Mount St. Helens.

According to Al Kinnon of Livingston Street, Tewksbury, who has been involved in electronics and radio communication since his high school days, the Federal Communication Commission's (FCC) allowance for amateur radio states that it must be used for the public good and must be available as a means of communication in emergencies. People must have a reason for being on the air, he explained, whether it is to simply chat with another person or to get desperately needed police, fire, or medical help in an emergency.

A person doesn't need a lot of money to get started in ham radio, Kinnon said, just a lot of interest. Currently, he has a very simple radio set up, which only involves a small antenna, a wire, a radio receiver and simple transmitter.

Kinnon said a person could pick up the necessary equipment for about $100, though avid radio operators have been known to spend as much as $200 for their equipment. The radio receivers ham operators use are different from the radios most people are familiar with in cars of homes. Ham receivers have different bans and frequencies on them, and with the right license from the FCC, an operator can broadcast on up to all of these stations.

Kinnon, a salesman and certified public accountant (cpa), became involved with radio broadcasting when CB radios were popular. CBs, he said, are similar to amateur radios yet tend to be very simple compared to the complex amateur radios. CBs are used generally for chatter or to warn drivers about where state troopers and speed traps may be. Amateur radio, on the other hand, is used to communicate with people in other parts of the world and to help local officials locate and aid accident victims.

After a while, Kinnon said, he became bored with his CB. Then, he found a newspaper article about Rick Beebee, the assistant director of the Eastern Mass. Chapter of the American Amateur Radio Relay League. The article was all about ham radio and how to get involved with it, so Kinnon called Beebee, who told him about the association's beginners' class.

The Billerica chapter of this organizaton, which has over 100 members including several from Tewksbury and Wilmington, offers a free class for people interested in ham radio. The class is given at the Billerica Honeywell facility, where the group also holds its meetings and training sessions. In order to get a ham radio license, a person has to take this course because the course helps students prepare for the written license exam. The course is given several times throughout the year and usually runs for eight to 10 weeks. Many of the people who take the course, Kinnon said, are family members or friends of current ham radio operators.

Although there is no cost for a ham radio license, applicants must take not only a written, but a Morse code test because this code is the basic means of communication for ham radio. There are several types of licenses from beginner to advanced, he said, but in order to advance to a higher license, a person must again pass a written and Morse code exam. The higher a ham moves on the license scale, the more frequencies he is able to broadcast on. Regardless of the type of license a person has or if he has a license at all, he can listen to all the frequencies on the receiver, but he can broadcast only on those stations allowed under his license. There are currently about 400,000 licenses for ham radios in the U.S., with over 1,000,000 license holders across the world.

The first exam an applicant takes to get his license is the Morse code test, he said, which is generally given by another ham. Once the applicant passes, the ham sends written notification to the FCC that the applicant passed that part of the test, and the FCC then forwards the written test to the ham to give to the applicant. Once the test is completed, it is sent back to the FCC where it is graded. If the person passes the written exam, he receives his license.

Ham radio broadcasting is different from regular radio or television broadcasting in several ways. Television and radio are allocated one frequency or station that must be used all the time. Hams, on the other hand, can broadcast across a wide range of frequencies and may change frequency any time. Ham radio can not be used for business purposes, however. There are special types of radios for businesses, but they are not the same as ham radios and receive a different license.

The FCC strictly regulates the use of ham radios, Kinnon said. To do this, he explained, the FCC monitors the radios to be sure people are using only those frequencies allowed in their license and are sticking to other broadcast guidelines. Only licensed operators are allowed to broadcast, too. Each licensee receives a call sign, he said, which he must state every 10 minutes while he is broadcasting. If a person does something wrong, he is notified and warned by the FCC.

Kinnon said he enjoys ham radio as a hobby because it is very different from what he does professionally. "And that's what's important about a hobby," he added, "that it's different from what you do all the time."

Although Kinnon considers ham radio a recreational activity, there are many other hams who take amateur radio quite seriously. The Billerica Amateur Radio Society, as part of the national organization, holds an annual field day to test emergency operation techniques. It is a contest that gives hams a chance to demonstrate their ability to provide communication in emergency situations. During the field day, which was held in June, thousands of hams set up their stations outdoors using only emergency power and portable antennas. They then tried to contact as many operators as possible in 24 hours.

But to Kinnon and others like him, ham radio is exciting, a chance to listen to, help, and communicate with thousands of people across the globe. Many people, he said, use their ham radios to talk to relatives in other states or parts of the world, and some ham radios can be hooked up to telephone systems, as well. Of course, while two relatives are broadcasting to each other, hams everywhere could be listening too. Because, after all, Kinnon said, "Nothing is private on amateur radio. You never know who may be listening."

Dr. Foster receives degree with first class from Tufts Veterinary College

Dr. Henry Foster, president and chairman of Charles River Breeding Laboratories in Wilmington, became a surprise member of Tufts University School of Veterinary Medicine's first graduating class when he was awarded a Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree extra ordinem at recent ceremonies.

Foster, who is also chairman of the school's visiting committee, earned a D.V.M. degree in 1946 from New England's last veterinary school, Middlesex Veterinary College in Waltham. The school, however, was not in existence long enough to earn its accreditaton, and thus, Foster's degree from Tufts is his first from an accredited institution. Tufts' vet school, which has provisional accreditation, expects to earn full accreditation in the fall of 1983.

Shortly aftr graduation from Middlesex, Foster founded, in a second-floor Boston loft, the Charles River Breeding Laboratories, now a multinational corporation and the world's largest breeder of laboratory animals. Under his direction, the laboratories have developed sterile breeding techniques to create, among others, Caesarean-Originated, Barrier-Sustained (COBS) rats and mice which have led to important breakthroughs in human medicine.

Says Dr. Franklin M. Loew, the veterinary school's dean, "No one is more responsible for improving the health of rodents used in research and teaching than Dr. Foster. Scientific techniques he has applied in his company are now used throughout the industry."

Foster, who stood with the veterinary class of 1983 to take the Veterinarians Oath, has written extensively in scientific publications and was most recently senior editor of The Mouse in Biomedical Research, published by Academic Press in 1982.

Foster is also a trustee of Brandeis University (located on the former campus of Middlesex Veterinary College), and he and his wife Lois have given substantial support to many Boston institutions, including the Museum of Fine Arts. When the veterinary school opened its doors in 1979, Foster also made a commitment to endow a chair in comparative medicine at the school, following graduation of its first class. That endowment will become a reality this fall.

Walton attends designers conference

Eleanor Walton, 36 Kendall Rd., Tewksbury, was among the many students and alumni of the interior design program of Chamberlayne Junior College in Boston who attended the 1983 National Conference of the American Society of Interior Design (ASID) held at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel and Hynes Auditorium.

The Chamberlayne participants hosted students and alumni of colleges from around the country.

The college has an active student chapter of ASID which students are eligible to join. They are invited to attend and meet professional designers at the society's monthly meetings and to participate in its other activities. Graduates of the three-year program become eligible to join ASID as associate members.

Dwight A. Carter, assistant to the chairman of the college's interior design program, was chairman of the student participation in the conference. Herbert T. Anderson, department chairman, also served on the committee. Paul H. Vincent, an instructor in the department, was a co-chairman of the conference. Sara Girard, also an instructor, delivered the keynote address on "Student Connection Day."

Mr. Anderson was presented a presidential citation from the national president of ASID. It was awarded for his contributions to education and to the society.

Town Crier Sports

Red Sox top Twins for town title

For the second consecutive year the Red Sox of the Tewksbury National Senior League have come away with the Town Championship, but not before a cliff hanging, extra inning struggle with the perenially tough American League champion Twins.

The Red Sox, National League first half champs, reached the title game by defeating the second half champion Cardinals in two straight games by scores of 4-1 and 7-2. Bob Dziadosz pitched a strong three-hitter in the opener. Bud McAllister had three hits for the victors and Joe Welch had all three hits for the Cardinals. Rookie southpaw Ed McGurn, fashioned a two-hitter in game two to provide the clincher. Gary Marotta had two hits for the Sox.

The Twins reached the town title game after two one game playoffs, as they were deadlocked with the Reds for the first half and tied with A's for the second half crown.

The Twins defeated the Reds, 10-5 behind Jim Maniscalco, with Greg Kobelski the hitting star. Dave Hicks pitched the 5-4 victory over the A's and won the game in extra innings with a squeeze bunt.

The Town Championship game found two tough right handed pitchers on the mound, Bob Dziadosz for the Red Sox and Jim Maniscalco for the Twins.

The game was tight throughout, with never more than one run separating the teams in regulation play. The Sox were out of the gate first, taking 1-0, 2-1 and 3-2 leads on RBI basehits by Gary Marotta and Bud McAllister, only to find the Twins battle back to knot the score each time, with Sanji Dhoulakia doubling in Bob Dunlay, who had singled to make it 3-3 after four innings.

In the bottom of the fifth, the Twins went ahead 4-3, but the Sox bounced back in the sixth inning to tie on back to back singles by Gary Marotta, Ed McGurn and McAllister. In the bottom of the sixth Sox' secondbaseman Jim Davis turned in the defensive play of the game when he made a one handed stab of a line drive by Greg Kobelski that was ticketed for rightfield with two runners on and nobody out. Davis then wheeled and fired to shortstop Larry Bisso for a doubleplay to end the threat.

In the top of the seventh, the Sox threatened with two outs, but Maniscalco was equal to the task. In the bottom of the inning, Dunlay led with a walk, Dhoulakia popped out, Dunlay stole second and reached third when Dziadosz threw the ball into centerfield on a pickoff attempt. The curveballing Dziadosz then escaped by fanning the next two batters to send the game into an extra frame.

In the eight innings the Sox erupted for four runs, two of which scored on a two strike bunt by Davis, and another on an RBI single by Matt Crowley. The Twins answered with a single run when Brian Kobelski doubled and scored on a groundball by Maniscalco for the 8-5 final.

Both pitchers went the route, with Dziadosz throwing a three-hitter with 10 strikeouts. Maniscalco also had his strikeout pitch working, whiffing 13. McAllister, G. Marotta, Dziadosz and Bisso had two hits each for the winners, while Dunlay, Dhoulakia and B. Kobelski had the Twins' safeties. Ron Mank was a defensive standout for the Twins.

The Red Sox team was managed by Bill Glencross and coached by Bob Dziadosz and Bill Glencross, Jr. The Players included Bud McAllister, Bob Dziadosz, Keith Alferi, John Priest, Larry Bosso, Gary Marotta, Cliff Marotta, Matt Crowley, Tom Higgins, Kirk Goldsworthy, Ed McGurn, Jim Davis, Mike Bisso and Wayne McNeil.

The American League champion Twins were managed by Ray Coulliard and coached by Al Hicks. The players included Greg Kobelski, Jim Maniscalco, Ron Mank, Bob Dunlay, Sanji Dhoulakia, Dave Mountcastle, Matt Daly, Dave Hicks, Rich Travers, Brian Kobelski, Jim Hamilton, Ed Piscopo and Gary Powers.

Views On Dental Health
By RANDALL SMITH, D.D.S.
85 Wilmington Road, Burlington. Phone: 272-0540.

GETTING A SECOND OPINION

If you have one or more teeth that are so badly decayed and weakened by gum disease that your dentist recommends extraction, should you accept his recommendation or seek a second opinion? No one looks forward to replacing natural teeth with artificial substitutes. They're never the same as your natural teeth. You won't have the same chewing efficiency, and they certainly won't feel the same as your natural teeth. Even more disturbing, once a natural tooth is gone, it's gone forever. That's why every feasible effort should be made to keep your natural teeth.

It may be that the teeth in question are not only badly decayed but causing you pain, but ask your dentist if anything can be done to save them. Perhaps they can be saved with root canal work to remove the infecton that's causing the decay and pain. Perhaps periodontal treatment or gum therapy will be needed to restore your dental health. It will probably cost much more than a simple extraction, but the investment is worth it, if you can save your teeth. There's no teeth like your own teeth.

Democrats at cookout

Among the notables at the Wilmington Democratic Town Committee cookout Saturday night were, from left, Dan Ballou, chairman of the Board of Selectmen; Bob Maloney, representing state auditor John Finnegan; Selectman Jimmy Stewart; State Rep. Jim Miceli; John Brooks of the Wilmington School Committee; Elaine Hachey, newly appointed member of the Wilmington Housing Authority; District Attorney Scott Harshbarger; County Commissioner Bill Schmidt; and Wilmington Democratic Town Committee Chairman Ralph Peterson.

And the winner is . . .

Like many other associations, the Wilmington Democratic Town Committee holds an annual drawing as a fundraiser. The prize is a trip to Acapulco, or $1000 cash.

Last year's drawing was chaired by Mike Nash, who is in the real estate business. The winner of the drawing was none other than Ed Nash, Mike's father, who had bought several tickets. Ed said he had bought the tickets to help the committee raise money. The winning ticket was drawn by Congressman Jim Shannon, in front of many people at the cookout.

This year, the chairman of the drawing was Anne Mahoney, who is also in the real estate business. As might be expected of people in the same business in the same town, Mike Nash and Anne Mahoney are not close friends.

The drawing was held at the Democratic cookout Saturday night. Anne did a thorough job of scrambling the ticket stubs, to ensure that the drawing would be random. She poured the stubs from one bucket to another and back again. Then, as she held the bucket high over her head, selectman Jim Stewart drew the winning ticket.

Jimmy Stewart looked at the name and passed it to Anne Mahoney. Anne's face dropped, and she passed the ticket to Ralph Peterson, Democratic Committee chairman.

Ralph read the winning name aloud: Mike Nash. Mike has elected to take the money instead of the trip.

Planning board postpones decision on new AMC dealership

A building permit for the new Wilmington AMC dealership on Main Street may be some distance away. So it appeared, at least, on August 9 at the meeting of the Wilmington Planning Board.

Ben Restuccia of Wilmington Ford has, the planning board has been told, an agreement with American Motors, for a new auto dealership. He is going to set aside a portion of the Ford lot on Main Street, and construct a building for the new dealership. Michael Nicolosi, a commercial builder, visited the planning board two weeks ago, and then again on August 9, to get planning board approval.

He didn't get it. On a vote by the board the approval was postponed until August 23. The vote was three to one. Arnold Blake voted "negative" and then termed it all "procrastination."

It was sort of a long, long story.

Rocco DePasquale, selectman, appeared at 8 p.m. for a few minutes to tell the planning board that he wants a public hearing, before Restuccia gets a first class license to sell AMC cars. He has been getting telephone calls, he said, both in favor and against.

When Nicolosi appeared before the board at 8:45 p.m., he had charted the site of the signs on the Ford property, as requested two weeks earlier. He had, on the plans, the site of the proposed building of 9100 square feet, and plans showing grass between the building and the street, as he had been requested.

"All I need is approval here, tonight" he said. Restuccia, he said, will get approval, "and I can start building in five weeks."

Anthony Gentile spoke up to say the selectmen wanted a public hearing. Arnold Blake asked whether the planning board was in a position to give permission "tonight."

The conversation went on and on. Nicolosi told the board, among other things, that Restuccia had already applied for a license. When Carole Hamilton wanted to talk about signs, he suggested that "we forget about them for a while. Mrs. Hamilton told him it was a part of the planning board "site review."

Finally Bill Hooper, chairman, reached over and put the official stamp on the plans, and Nicolosi left.

That stamp did not mean the plan was approved. It meant solely that it had been submitted to the planning board. The planning board, by law, has 35 days to consider a plan, from a planning viewpoint. So far the plan had been in their hands for two weeks.

Then, at 10 p.m., while the planning board was discussing other items the chairman of the board of selectmen, Dan Ballou appeared. That started another conversation about whether or not the planning board had to approve before the selectmen did, and whether or not the selectmen had to advertise for a public hearing. It went on and on.

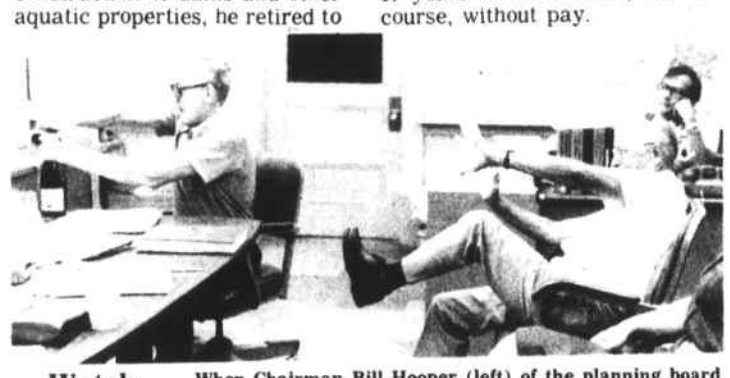

Finally, with everyone seemingly confused, Mr. Gentile suggested that the planning board postpone any decision until August 23. This was after 25 minutes of conversation.

The vote was three to one, Blake voting negative. Ballou then left. He said he was going to talk with the town manager in the morning.

Blake retires, continues to work

Arnold Blake, a retired professional engineer, is back in the harness again.

After a full lifetime of civil engineering, mostly in the construction of dams and other aquatic properties, he retired to Wilmington about 20 years ago. He was immediately "grabbed" by Harold Melzar, chairman of the board of water commissioners, and Arnold served 17 years on that board, all, of course, without pay.

Watch that cork!

When Chairman Bill Hooper (left) of the planning board opened a bottle of champagne to toast Arnold Blake, Arnold expected to be doused with champagne. The camera caught him in an unplanned pose, not customary for town officials.

Finally, four years ago, he retired as a water commissioner, but the town manager needed someone on the planning board. He was asked to serve for a month or two, until someone else could be found. Arnold soon found himself serving out the remainder of a four year term.

July 26, 1983, was the end of that four year term. Arnold Blake made no bones about it. He was going to retire, and he meant it.

Chairman Bill Hooper agreed. He even brought a bottle of champagne to the planning board meeting, the only time any such beverage has been seen at such a meeting. Hooper opened the champagne, after the meeting had concluded, to toast Arnold Blake for his many years of service.

But.

Al Reidy, regular member of the planning board has just returned home from the hospital. He would be confined to his home for several weeks.

The town needs a full board, because at this time there are several subdivisons, and other items in the agenda. One man absent, for illness, and another absent because of something or other could be a little disaster.

So Arnold was asked to serve for another month. Just one month.

And Arnold is back on a board, in full harness.

Wilmington police news

During the week ending August 9, Wilmington police officers responded to two accidents, 25 alarms and 10 incidents of suspicious activity.

Seven arrests were made along with four protective custody detentions. Another department was assisted, 18 disturbances were quieted and eight larcenies were investigated.

Three vehicles were reported stolen and one vehicle was recovered, two complaints involving trailbikes and 13 involving traffic were logged.

An assault and battery complaint was checked out, two break and entries were investigated, seven domestic problems were quieted and four incidents of vandalism are still under investigation.

Arrests

Friday evening Wilmington officers assisted Boston and State Police in arresting a Framingham man who had stolen a Boston Police motorcycle in Boston. The suspect was later spotted on Route 93 and he then dumped the bike near West Street.

Officer Bob Shelley received information from his scanner and Officer Jepson, while on detail located the man on West Street where he arrested him and turned him over to State Police officers.

Ronald Chisson of Carling Road, Framingham was charged with larceny of the motorcycle and several other violations in Boston Municipal Court.

Two Wakefield residents were arrested late Friday as a result of an investigation into a house break on Roberts Road.

Raymond Keith, 22, of North Street, Wakefield and a juvenile companion were charged, late Friday with burglary, malicious damage to private property and receiving stolen property. Bail was set at $100 for Keith's appearance in court. The juvenile was turned over to her parents.

The arrest was made by Sgt. Rooney and Officers McCue, Waterhouse and Vassallo.

Sunday evening Officer Vassallo, after investigating an accident after which one driver had left the scene, later arrested that suspect charging him with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and leaving the scene of an accident without making himself known. The suspect was bailed for a Monday appearance in Woburn District Court.

Arrests made during the week included several on default warrants issued from Woburn and Lowell courts. One subject, James Donahue of Jackson Street, Lawrence was arrested by Salisbury Police after a computer check revealed an active warrant being held by Wilmington. He was brought back to Wilmington for a Tuesday court appearance.

Near drowning

Tragedy was narrowly averted at 2:30 a.m. Friday when officers responded to a call for help at Silver Lake.

Officer Pat King and Sgt. Palmer went to the scene and found a man who had lost contact with his female swimming companion. Officer King found her a short time later, apparently floating in about three feet of water. After pulling her out of the lake, he was able to revive her with artificial respiration. The fire department ambulance arrived and gave her oxygen at the scene. She was then transported to the Regional Health Center where she was treated and released.

Please note: Silver Lake is closed to swimming from midnight to 6 a.m. The town beach is closed to swimming after 7 p.m. when the lifeguards leave the premises.

Rooney given punishment duty

Wilmnington Police Sgt. James Rooney was given 2 days punishment duty after an incident last month involving abuse of sick leave.

According to Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, Sgt. Rooney called in sick for the evening shift on Monday, July 25. Investigating Sgt. Rooney's claim, Chief Bobby Stewart found it to be incorrect. He confronted Sgt. Rooney the following day, and assigned the punishment duty, which is work with no pay.

Earlier this year, Sgt. Rooney was given a 15-day suspension after men working under him changed a report on a breathalyzer test. At that time, the Wilmington Police Association voted to pay Sgt. Rooney money to replace his lost pay.

The fire alarm went off several times

A friend who just got hired as a bartender at a new hotel in town related the following incident to us recently:

The first day I walked into this brand new hotel to start a new job I felt as if I was beginning college all over again. Still wrapping up construction, the hotel reminded me of a huge, rambling university, with its magnificent architecture. Only instead of auditoriums and classrooms, there were spacious ballrooms, several bars and restaurants, swimming pools and a health club, and a gift shop. I was definitely going to need a map to find my way around.

As it turned out, that was not the case. We were given two weeks of intensive orientation. I didn't think I'd require it, but I soon discovered, regardless of how experienced you were, each new employee — there were more than four hundred of us — had to be carefully deprogrammed of old habits and reconditioned to perform his or her new duties the hotel's way.

It was during one of those training sessions, which were no less grueling than some college courses, that the new bartenders and cocktail waitresses experienced a bizarre close-call with what could have developed into a tragedy.

Due to lack of space caused by the on-going construction, we were using the employees' cafeteria as our classroom. Our instructor, a tall, somewhat rotund middle-aged fellow with short, receding hair, a friendly face and a husky voice was discussing the fundamentals of fermentation when suddenly the fire alarm at the back of the room went off.

The instructor ceased at mid-sentence and automatically speared a glance at the alarm box. Our eyes trailed his. The intermittent wails were loud but lasted only briefly.

"They're obviously testing the fire alarm system," he explained, and went on with his discourse.

Barely a moment passed before our attentiveness was once again cut by those ear-splitting wails. Our instructor froze and cast a scowl at the little red box next to the emergency exit. He seemed to be waiting for the alarm to shut off.

Finally it did. But it didn't remain that way for long. The instructor had only time to flip to a fresh sheet of paper over on his artist's easel before the infernal thing went off for a third time. He was becoming visibly irritable, but after asking everybody to resign themselves to the interruptions, even he appeared to calm down. We resumed the class.

The lull that followed the third sounding lasted so long most of us forgot all about the previous interruptions. Since the air-conditioning unit was also not yet in full operation, our minds were more on the extreme heat and humidity. At one point our instructor requested somebody at the rear of the cafeteria to open the door to let in some air. I was closest to the door, so I opened it.

Within the next thirty minutes the fire alarm went off several more times. No one was paying attention to it anymore. Then those of us seated in the back began to notice an acrid smell creeping through the open door. In a matter of seconds we realized the odor was smoke.

I glimpsed out one of several large cafeteria windows overlooking the remains of the construction area at the back of the hotel. Beside the cafeteria was a huge receiving area. The smoke was originating from inside one three trailor truck-size dumpsters that had been backed up against the platform leading to the receiving area. The dumpsters overflowed with the remnants of materials used in the building of the hotel.

Suddenly monstrous flames exploded from the top of the dumpster nearest to the cafeteria. The flames quickly grew higher, lapping over the sides of the dumpster and up against the hotel. A dense cloud built over the entire ara.

Someone hollered there was a fire outside. The whole class craned their necks to look out the windows. The fire alarm went off again, stopping, as it had all along, after a few sharp blasts.

Remaining cool, our instructor suggested somebody set off the fire alarm for real. I got up, pulled the tiny t-shaped handle in

New Wave Shopping

Local woman takes west coast idea and uses it here

By STEVAN-ADELE MORLEY

It would behoove you to familiarize yourself with the term New Wave Shopping because you are going to hear a lot about it from now on.

It is prevalent in California, Texas, the Deep South, and is becoming popular in the East, especially in New England, thanks to a 38-year-old go-getter named Kathleen Collins.

"This method of shopping is not just my idea," Collins explained to me recently. "There are currently 60 major outlet centers in 25 states thriving this very minute. I want to get everyone in my state involved with keeping our American industries alive. New Wave Shopping is scheduled by economist and market researchers as the primary method of consumerism through the year 2,000."

New Wave Shopping begins with the latest copy of a "secret shopper." This is a special coupon book that you purchase through Collins' office — Current Trends, Inc.

The "secret shopper coupon book" takes you to "secret sources" who manufacture for or provide retail stores with merchandise — new, superior brand names and designers labels that you see in fine stores across the U. S. All items are first quality current merchandise which ranges in categories from designer clothes to silver to children's wear and decorator household accessories.

Outlets involved in this extraordinary book offer you an average normal discount of 50% from retail prices. They have given Current Trends, Inc. authority to add 10% to 20% more to their regular discounts.

When you've used all 27 coupons in the "secret shopper," you could benefit by $1,600.00 or more in additional buying power or savings.

Wait! Now let me tell you how New Wave Shopping works....

Armed with your "secret shopper," you board a chartered bus (air-conditioned or heated, according to the season). You travel with a limited group of 35-40 other shoppers. You choose a seat, put on the stereo headphones, listen to music, nap, or go

On the rise

Mortgage rates dampen building

By David T. Cook
Business correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

Washington

Rising mortgage rates are raining on the housing industry's recovery and disrupting the plans of individual home buyers and sellers.

Mortgage costs have climbed sharply in recent months with the contract rate on government-insured loans jumping from 11.5 percent in May to 13.5 percent Aug. 1. And many forecasters expect mortgage costs to climb some more before the end of the summer.

"Fixed-rate loans will be at 14 percent very shortly," says James Christian, chief economist of the US League of Savings Associations.

Forecasters are divided over whether rates will ease in the fall, depending on what monetary policy actions they expect the Federal Reserve system to take. In testimony before Congress this week, Fed chairman Paul A. Volcker called interest rates "extraordinarily high" and reiterated his position that they should fall.

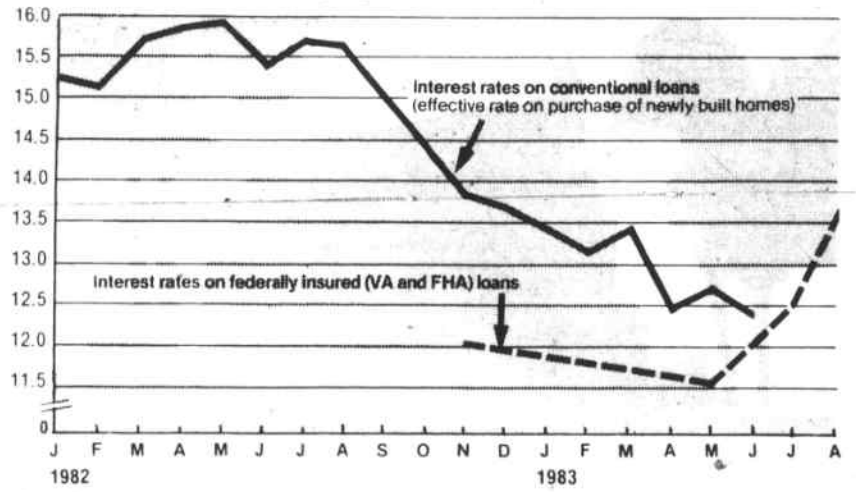

Concern among builders is widespread. In May, 10 percent of the contractors surveyed by the National Association of Home Builders expected poor business in the next six months. By July, 25 percent were pessimistic.

As a result, building plans have been trimmed. For example, Forest City Enterprises recently has "pulled back on 400 lots we were going to develop" for homes, says Sam H. Miller, vice-chairman of the Cleveland-based company. "That is a direct result of mortgage rates."

In Virginia, Ryan Homes Inc. posted strong sales this June. July sales figures are not available, but higher mortgage rates "will have some effect on buyers," says Christopher Zell, regional marketing-services manager.

In June the number of homes started fell 2.9 percent to reach a 1.74 million annual rate, still 92 percent higher than the June 1982 level. As recently as 1978, 2.02 million homes were started. But by the end of 1984, starts will be dragging along at a 1.4 million pace, according to William Young, research economist at the National Association of Home Builders.

The upturn in rates is also dampening prospects for homeowners who want to sell their current residences and move to larger houses. In June the recovery in resales ground to a virtual halt as existing homes sold at a 2.9 million annual rate.

While homeowners sell 3.5 million homes a year in a typical economic recovery, for the rest of 1983 resales will probably run at a 2.7 million rate, according to Kenneth Kerin, vice-president for economics and research at the National Association of Realtors. In 1984 he expects resales to total 2.8 million.

"If rates are below 12 percent, you have a nice, healthy housing recovery," Mr. Kerin says. "If they get above 14 percent, things come slamming down."

Of course, some limited sectors of the housing market are relatively immune to mortgage-rate vagaries. For example, Forest City Enterprises is proceeding with development of lots for high-priced homes. "The man who is going to buy a house for $300,000 to $400,000 either pays cash or doesn't care about rates, because he takes it off his taxes," vice-chairman Miller says.

But Mr. Kerin, the National Association of Realtors economist, says such a narrow segment "is not enough to make a market."

What would make a market is a return to more affordable interest rates. When rates to the lounge and make friends while traveling.

New Wave Shopping... From S-1

There are kitchens on these special busses — you will be served fresh coffee, donuts, pastries, etc. There are restrooms. And, upon request — depending on the likes or dislikes of your particular group — you may have access to a bar, and are served your favorite cocktails.

Aboard every bus will be a Consumer Guide — who will explain the various outlet stores you'll visit, tell you the best buys available that day, tell you the latest fashions, etc., and answer all your questions.

Within an hour after departure, you will be given a large shopping bag — a gift — and you'll leave the bus and begin your shopping spree. And you'll be given the opportunity to avail yourself of whatever it is you want to buy at 35-60 percent off the regular retail prices.

After a few hours of shopping, you will enjoy a rest stop, or luncheon break, at a restaurant where your reservation has been made for you. And you'll enjoy a soup to nuts meal at your leisure.

Then you'll resume your shopping until it's time to board the bus and return home — again, in style.

Kathleen (Kathy) Collins is a New Englander who at present is making her home in Stoneham. She corporated Current Trends, Inc. this summer after almost a year of legwork, intensive retail and consumer buying patterns studies, a lot of energy and initiative to make a big dream come to fruition.

She explained, "Many things work together to create a project of this magnitude. Two things in particular helped it to jell for me — I worked for eight years with a major U. S. airline as a flight attendant." She learned how people like to travel, what is comfortable for them, what they require to be a "return" traveler.

"Add that experience to my five years of working in the garment industry as a representative for Geoffrey Beene, Perry Ellis and Carol Horn (all three were Coty Award Winners) by distributing and placing their designs in prestigious outlets such as Neiman Marcus, Sakowitz, SportPages and Triffles Catalogs, Sanger Harris in Texas, and Woolf Brothers in Kansas City...."

She was one of a small select group of handpicked fashion reps (there were four men and Kathy) who participated in an international joint venture — consultants and importers for the Export Council of Great Britain. They selected, assembled, edited and distributed British designer collections to all major markets in the U. S. They even negotiated American financing and contracts for and with ten British companies and acted as liaison to the British Consulate.

She acquired valued experience in Hong Kong as a design consultant for large groups of American retail groups off and on for about three years.

Collins worked as the Executive Vice President-Marketing, making up the management team with her step-father (Robert H. Thorson) at Thor Exteriors — a roofing company. She attended Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, was a teaching assistant in Sales Training in Dale Carnegie Institute, besides working as a consultant for the British Export Commission of the United Kingdom. She has lectured on the college level at a number of colleges on marketing and sales — and she has capitalized on coupon popularity, designs, availability, styles, consumer needs, etc.

She believes "We are still the richest area in the country for clothing and textile industries. I want our New England people to be able to take advantage of our most worthwhile natural resource — on a contemporary, realistically priced basis."

She said, "I know that things are bad financially. But there is a way to treat yourself and your family to the best and within your budget!"

Collins' shopping excursions are tailored for you and your group's needs and wants. For instance, "If you and your group are interested primarily in buying school clothes for your children, then a special 'children's clothes' shopping spree will be organized, complete with Consumer Advisor to take you where you can purchase anything and everything you could possibly want for your children."

She was contacted by the Architects Conservation Trust Act for Massachusetts and asked to write the Marketing Plan for a Manufacturers' Outlet Center — Durfee, Union Mill Place in Fall River.

It is a fourteen acre project that will house professional offices, medium and high-tech production, restaurants, and possibly a Mill Place Inn for shoppers who want to spend more time in the area.

Collins said, "Within the Fall River-New Bedford area there are at least 150 other outlets, and over 1200 in Massachusetts alone to take my people to."

It won't be long before Kathleen Collins' shopping excursions will take you to Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Maine, and as far away as Reading, PA.

"In a time when jobs are scarce, I am going after the great American dream of prosperity. I have created — with the luck of the Gods — my own niche. I am doing this to share with others, to benefit all of us...."

If you are interested in the "secret shopper," in this New Wave Shopping, contact Ms. Collins by writing to Current Trends, Inc., P.O. Box 165, Stoneham, MA 02180. Or you may call her daily at 438-6698.

"I'll be more than happy to explain everything, tell you when the shopping excursions will begin in your area, and will take your reservations...."

New Wave Shopping tours will start around the first of September. There will be chartered trips — daily — on demand for local shoppers.

"Soft goods and hard goods will be available to all my shoppers," Collins explained. "Those going to the Fall River area will find approximately 10 acres, 30 buildings — 500,000 square feet of building space — or shopping space! And this is only one of the places my shoppers will go to...."

Well, it sure beats driving to a train station, parking the car, taking the commuter into Boston, fighting the hot, half-angry crowds of women who grab items out of your hands and bruise your pride and your ribs...think I'll try this New Wave Shopping for myself.

From S-1

Mortgage rates...

are in the 12 to 18 percent range, the National Association of Home Builders estimates that each 1 percent rise in rates disqualifies 1.2 million families.

The outlook for mortgage rates hinges on the outcome of monetary policy and congressional action to reduce budget deficits that tend to push up interest rates, economists say.

Several forecasters see little short-term relief on mortgage rates. "We will have rates around 14 percent or better for the remainder of the year," Mr. Kerin says. "I think rates are going to stay pretty much where they are," says Mr. Christian of the League of Savings Associations.

Given the large size of projected federal budget deficits, Mr. Kerin expects the Fed to keep its hands "firmly on the reins" of the economy. Mr. Christian does not think the Fed will slow the economy sharply enough to ease the tug of war between private credit needs and government borrowing demands. That battle tends to push up interest rates.

But Warren Matthews, Mortgage Bankers Assocation senior economist, expects rates to dip slightly to the 12.5 to 13.5 percent level by year's end, assuming the Fed can keep inflation under control and convince financial markets this control will not slip away.

Melrose–Wakefield needs volunteers

Volunteers are needed at Melrose-Wakefield Hospital, particularly for the remainder of the summer.; A combination of planned vacations and unexpected vacation opportunities have created a special need for new volunteers.

Immediate openings include Coffee Shop Cashier, 9 a.m. — 1:00 p.m. or 1 p.m. — 4:00 p.m. and taking food orders behind the counter 10 or 11 a.m. — 1:30 p.m. There are also reception desk openings in the 2nd floor patient waiting area involving 3-hour shifts between 9 a.m. — 9 p.m.

"We are always interested in interviewing possible volunteers," said Department Head Meredith Wagner, "but we'd like to see some people right away for openings between now and Labor Day."

Miss Wagner went on to point out that it's a good time to try volunteering to see if you want to fit it into your winter schedule. And many like the chance to see if the inner workings of a hospital might interest them for later employment. Those interested in volunteering their services should call Miss Wagner at the hospital 662-7200, Ext. 3090 or 3091.

KOOL JAZZ FESTIVAL

Tania Maria, the fiery Brazilian singer-pianist, has been added by producer George Wein to the opening day concert, Saturday, Aug. 20, at the KOOL JAZZ Festival here.

The two day Jazz spectacular observes the 30th anniversary on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 20-21, from noon to 6:30 P.M. each day at Fort Adams State Park.

Tania Maria has taken the Jazz world by storm over the past two years with her colorful performing style that blends scat-singing and energetic Latin rhythms.

Other performers on the Saturday bill include Oscar Peterson (a participant on the first Newport Jazz Festival in 1954), the Stan Getz Quartet, Vic Dickenson, Gato Barbieri, and the popular sextet, Spyro Gyra.

Sunday's stellar lineup includes Ella Fitzgerald, Dizzy Gillespie, Art Blakey and the Jazz Messengers featuring Terrance Blanchard, Lonnie Plaxico, Donald Harrison and Johnny O'Neal with guest stars Freddie Hubbard and John Faddis; the Wynton Marsalis Quintet featuring Branford Marsalis, Kenny Kirkland, Jeff Matts and Ray Drummond; the George Wein KOOL JAZZ Festival All-Stars, comprised of Scott Hamilton, Oliver Jackson, Warren Vache, Slam Stewart, Vic Dickenson, George Wein and others.

Tickets are now on sale at all Ticketron outlets and major ticket agencies throughout New England. Advance tickets are $17.50 per day, $20.00 on the days of the concerts. Ticket sales are limited to 6,500 each day. No alcoholic beverages will be permitted.

TOPSFIELD FAIR

As the venerable Topsfield Fair begins final preparations for its 159th annual presentation, Oct. 1 through Oct. 10, officials have announced that country music would be the theme of the grandstand shows, even as it was at the very modest entertainment at the first fair in 1818.

During the intervening years since its inaugural, the Fair experimented with the many changing contemporary tastes in entertainment — from chaste concerts, musical comedy, Broadway spectaculars to several varieties of Rock — before returning three years ago to the newly popular and still current 'country' beat. And the customers loved it.

Boston born and bred Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass kicked off the Topsfield revival in 1980 and will return this year to close the show on Oct. 8, 9, and 10. Davis, a trumpet virtuoso, grew up in Dorchester and Randolph but, after forming his own band, he fled to Nashville, figuring that "Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass" would have a lot more audience appeal than Danny Davis and the "Randolph Brass." He was right, of course. He's now a Nashville legend.

Sharing the spotlight with Danny at Topsfield will be Tommy Cash and the Tomcats Oct. 1, 2, 3; sultry Helen Cornelius and the Southern Spirits, Oct. 4 and 5; the steamy Sunshine Express, Oct. 6 and 7 and finally Danny Davis, over the Columbus Day holiday weekend, Oct. 8, 9, and 10. There will be three complete free performances daily — matinees, supper and evening shows. Abe Ford, veteran Boston talent representative, assembled the stars and will produce the show.

CPR & FIRST AID

Instructor courses require current certificates in the subject-course applied for and enrollees must be at least 17 years old at the beginning of the courses. The following is a list of all upcoming educational courses:

PHOTO CONTEST

The Ipswich River Watershed Association is sponsoring its second Annual Photo Contest. This year's theme is "The Beautiful Ipswich River Watershed" and photos should inspire appreciation for the River and its environs. Entries will be judged on originality, compostion and visual impact. First and second prizes will be awarded in three categories: color; black & white; youth (16 years and under). Winning photos will be displayed at the IRWA booth at the Topsfield Fair, Oct. 1-10, and prizes will be awarded on Monday, Oct. 3 at the Fair.

This contest was very popular last year, so start taking those photos and sending them in. Entries will be accepted any time up to Friday, Sept. 16. They may be sent to "IRWA Photo Contest, 562 Maple St., Hathorne, Mass. 01937" or may be delivered to the IRWA office, Smith Hall, Rm. 34, Essex Agricultural and Technical Institute, between 8 A.M. — 4 P.M. Up to three pictures per entrant will be accepted. They must be a minimum of 5 x 7 inches and mounted appropriately. The photos must be identified as to where they were taken within the Watershed and should not be previous entries in an IRWA contest. Your name, address and phone number must accompany the photos. For further information, call 887-9685.

PUPPET SHOW AT MACOMBER

The hundreds of live animals at Macomber Farm in Framingham are not the only way families who visit there learn about the humane treatment of animals. A new puppet show, the Macomber Merrymakers, is a presentation of skits and songs which makes learning about animals fun through participation.

Macomber Farm, a 46-acre educational facility owned and operated by the Mass SPCA, is designed to enlighten visitors' awareness of the interdependence between people and farm animals. The Macomber Merrymakers offer another means to communicate the important role animals play in our lives.

During the 30-minute Macomber Merrymakers show, the audience is encouraged to sing along with Fee Bee, Funny Bunny and Rosebud Skunk in songs with lines such as "leave 'em alone and they won't hurt you" and "remember, your pets depend on you." Other segments of the show are educational as well — a chicken describes why she "frazzles" in the dirt, Zachery the Snake assures the audience he is harmless, and Ms. Moon Raccoon explains her nighttime raids on garbage cans.

The show's creator and writer of all songs used in the show is Marya Danihel, a freelance entertainer who performs throughout New England in storytelling-folksinging shows designed especially for children as well as in Victorian music concerts. Marya, who is a resident of Peterborough, New Hampshire, holds a Masters degree in Theater Arts from Smith College and teaches private singing lessons.

The voice and motion behind Fee Bee, Funny Bunny and the other puppets is that of Don Kirk, proprieter of Odyssey Puppets in Everett, Massachusetts and 13-year veteran of puppetry and drama.

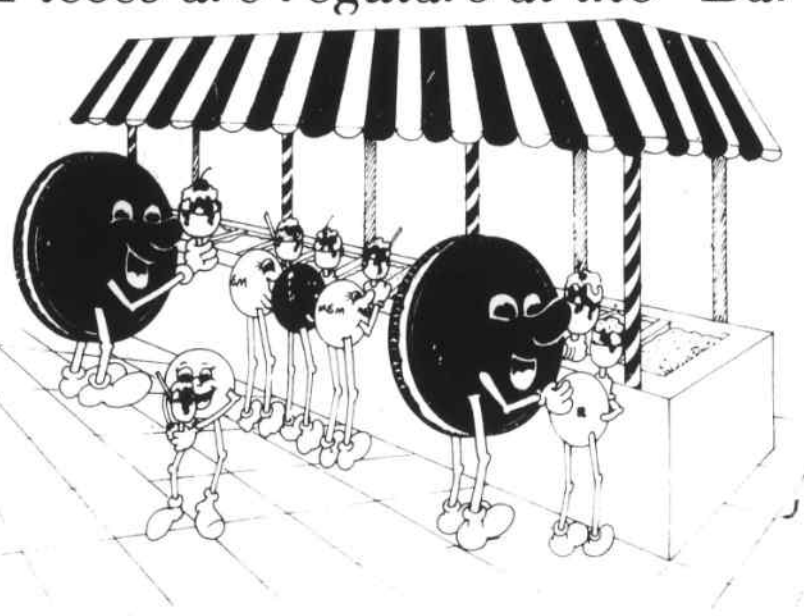

Marya Danihel and her cast of life-like puppets perform Thursday through

Tai Chi: Energy through graceful exercise

By William Pacino

Travel the longest distance possible along a chosen path of life.

Such a journey is a most worthy endeavor, but how can it be accomplished?

The strength and health necessary for this voyage will come from a commitment to daily exercise.

People who do some form of exercise on a regular basis (at least three times a week for one hour per period) have better circulation, better muscle tone, and fewer illnesses than people who do not exercise. In addition, those who exercise regularly usually enjoy a feeling of physical and mental well-being.

If good health is sought as a goal of life, then the heart must be given work beyond the minimal demands made on it by sedentary living.

Recommended exercises are varied, including jogging, swimming, tennis, golf and skiing. Emphasis during the workout periods is on gradually giving the body more work to do until an optimum level of fitness is reached, measured by pulse rate before, and at stated intervals after exercise. Certain exercises seem more suitable for some age groups than for other. Thus a milder form of exercise is usually recommended for older people, persons in poor health, or those who are recovering from an illness.

I would like to introduce Tai Chi Ch'uan, a unique system of exercise developed hundreds of years ago in China by Taoist monks. This form of exercise consists of a graceful, deliberate routine, done while standing and shifting body weight in slow, continuous movement. This exercise, using concentration and deep breathing, works to reduce muscular tension and increase body awareness. A program of Tai Chi can be learned inexpensively and fairly quickly from courses offered locally at the Middlesex Community College in Bedford, the Cambridge Center for Adult Education in Harvard Square and at several Greater Boston YMCAs.

Timing of an ocean wave

The 108 basic moves or forms of Tai Chi use every part of the body. Hands, elbows, fists, legs, shoulders, head, buttocks, feet, toes, sides of feet - even the eyes - are all brought into play in a pattern of continually flowing movement. The exercise is performed in a slow, almost leisurely manner, without any special muscular effort. And because it isn't strenuous, anyone from eight to 80 can practice Tai Chi at no risk and with the promise of renewed vitality and longer life.

In China, Tai Chi is viewed with great respect, and many Chinese claim that it has been known to lower high blood pressure and to alleviate joint diseases and gastric disturbances.

Tai Chi is an ideal way to exercise for many people who are interested in attaining and maintaining a reasonable degree of physical fitness and for whom a high level of fitness is unnecessary. Those who begin to practice Tai Chi soon realize it is not effortless. The Tai Chi form demands a considerable amount of work by the leg muscles because it is done with bent knees in a kind of quarter squat. Weight shifts from foot to foot as the form is performed, involving all parts of the body in building muscle tone and aiding improved circulation.

Because the Tai Chi form excludes extreme movements and emphasizes gradualness in learning, its practitioners avoid the pulled muscles and other injuries that sometimes accompany more strenous activities. Students are not called upon to twist and turn in a way that might cause parts of the body to suffer strain. Instead, a feeling of restraint is encouraged and no movement is ever forced.

The possibility of injury increases when exercise is left to weekends and is not done three or four times a week. Authorities on the subject are in accord that this is a dangerous practice because the body is not accustomed to the demands made on it and will react adversely instead of being helped. A milder form of exercise which can be done daily is much preferred over a more strenuous one performed infrequently. Tai chi, which can be practiced in one's home and needs no special equipment, is well suited to daily exercise.

The value of Tai Chi seems to stem as much from its psychological as from its physiological effects. The fact that modern medicine is finding more and more connections between mental attitudes and physical health may indeed help to explain the value of Tai Chi, which is designed to have a calming effect on the mind and nervous system.

Western exercise programs, with a mindless 1-2-3 repetition, don't deal with the need for a total exercise, one that encompasses both mind and body.

If people are to exercise regularly, month after month and year after year - a requirement that fitness experts consider important for continued good health - they must have an exercise that is interesting. Calisthenics become boring. Running laps around a track, or swimming from one end of a pool to another, often becomes mentally tiresome. Jogging over changing terrain is interesting for some, but weather conditions sometimes prohibit this form of exercise. Few activities can match the variety and interest of the Tai Chi form.

The movements are based on self-defense techniques. Because attention must be given to balance and co-ordination, it is difficult to do the form automatically. Performing an exercise that absorbs your attention is important because it has been demonstrated that people generally derive less than optimum benefit from doing exercises they consider uninteresting or boring.

In addition to its value in developing physical fitness, practicing Tai Chi as an exercise also develops the ability to use our body in a more efficient way. "Efficiently" the legs become strong enough to fully do the job of supporting and transporting the standing, walking and running body. When the legs are weak there is tendency for muscles of the upper body to be used to compensate and, as a result, to become tense.

Tensing muscles which are not needed to perform a movement result in an expenditure of energy needlessly. This in turn tires the body more quickly. Emphasis while doing the Tai Chi form is on using only the minimum of strength needed to accomplish an action. With this in mind, a goal becomes using your body fully in whatever you are doing. For example, opening a door with your body and not just your arm.

Learning to relax contributes to a more efficient use of the body, but it confers benefits beyond this. Relaxation receives major emphasis in Tai Chi. As the form is practiced, muscles unnecessary to a particular action are kept loose and free of tension. Shoulders are not raised or tightened, the chest is not thrown out or forward, breathing becomes deeper, and the stomach is permitted to move in and out with each breath. The body is not forced to perform beyond comfortable limits.

These limits are gradually extended as strength and flexibility increase with daily practice. Breathing is not forced or tampered as in some systems of exercise and mediation. Instead the body is permitted to take in the amount of air it needs on the assumption that it is the wisest judge of its requirements.

If you notice the changes in your breathing while doing the form, you become aware that after a few minutes of practice your breathing becomes deeper and slower. This happens naturally and without direction by your conscious mind. In the same way, doing the form in as relaxed a way as possible, and with correct posture, permits your body to function freely and naturally, instead of being forced into the cramped and twisted contortions or the hypertensions necessary in some sports and exercises.

All the movements of Tai Chi are geared to encourage relaxation. The weight of the body shifts continuously from one foot to the other and the movements are performed in circles, arcs and spirals. The end of each movement becomes the beginning of the next one, which conserves energy and produces a feeling of tranquility and emotional security.

Unfortunately for those who want quick results, the attainment of this relaxed state is not a matter of a few weeks. A fast-paced, often hectic life produces a degree of tension that most people are unaware of. It takes months and even years for some students to release this tension. It is a gradual process, but it produces a feeling of calm and well-being that is new and welcome.

Mystery of 'Chi'

At the heart of Tai Chi is the Chinese concept of 'chi', a word of many meanings - air, vitality, spirit, breath, atmosphere and circulation. It is hard to define "chi". One Tai Chi expert calls it "biophysical energy generated by respiratory rhythm." Perhaps the best English equivalent is "intrinsic energy" or "vital force." Whatever 'chi' is, doctors of Chinese medicine say it can be cultivated through practice of the exercise and stored in a spot called the "tan-t'ien," located exactly three inches below the navel. Once stored, the chi can be circulated by the mind through the body.

In an ancient Chines treatise on Tai Chi, the author stated, "The mind directs the 'chi,' which sinks deeply and permeates the bones. The 'chi' circulates freely, mobilizing the body so that it heeds the direction of the mind. If the 'chi' is correctly cultivated, your spirit of vitality will rise and you will feel light and alert." It is this physical and mental effortness, as manifested through the Tai Chi exercise, that accounts for the prolongation and rejuvenation of life.

Exercising, along with proper dietary habits, should be considered an essential part of your life. Essential because such practices provide the strength and health that will enable you to travel the longest distance possible along your chosen path.

Late registration program for Practical Nursing Program at Northeast Regional

The Northeast Metropolitan Regional Vocational School's Practical Nursing Program is now accepting applicants for a late September starting date.

Interested students should pick up an application package at the school's main office, or call the school at 246-0810 and request that the application package be mailed. To be eligible, students must, at a minimum, possess a high school diploma or equivalent, and satisfy other admissions criteria.

The application deadline has been set for Saturday, August 13, at 9:00 A.M. at which time the Allied Health Entrance Examination prepared by the Psychological Corporation will be administered by the Northeast nursing staff. This examination will be held in the Cafetorium at the school on Hemlock Road, Wakefield. Applications received after this date will be placed on a waiting list.

This upcoming one-year Practical Nurse Program is being offered as a result of a funding contract with the Melrose-Wakefield Hospital and the U.S. Army Reserves. This funding arrangement will enable the program to continue on a tuition-free basis. Students will be responsible for expenses such as books, uniforms, transportation and meals. This will bring the cost of the program for students to approximately $400-$500.

The Practical Nurse Program will use Melrose-Wakefield Hospital for its Medical-Surgical and Maternity experience, and continue to use the North Shore Childrens' Hospital in Salem for a four-week Pediatric Rotation. Classes in theory will be held at Northeast Regional Vocational School in Wakefield.

This Week's Poetry

DUSK

The little birds cease their twittering
Their melodious voices are still
For dusk is slowly creeping
O'er every valley and hill.

The flowers have closed their petals
Their fragrance they no longer spread,
For Dusk has made them sleepy
And they have gone to bed.

Dusk! The time of day one loves
God somehow seems more near
And a benediction settles down
Upon us mortals here.

GERMAN-AMERICAN CLUB

The Sixth Annual Salem Oktoberfest, sponsored by the German-American Club of the North Shore, will be held in the Salem Market Place on Friday, September 9, from 6:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. and on Saturday, September 10, from 10:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. Admission is free and everyone is welcome. There is plenty of parking available in nearby lots.

Just as in Bavaria, a large open tent will be the center of the festivities. There will be three bands providing music for dancing, singing, clapping of hands, "schunkeln", or just listening. The Freddie Dee Band will play from 6:00 p.m. until 10:00 p.m. on Friday, the Buddy Walker Oompah Band on Saturday afternoon from 1:00 p.m. until 5:00 p.m. and the Oberlander Hofbrau Band on Saturday evening from 6:00 p.m. until 10:00 p.m. A group of dancers from our Club will perform authentic German Folk Dances at various times throughout the festival. Many club members and friends dress in traditional costumes adding old-world color and charm to the occasion.

There will be plenty of delicious food and drink to satisfy the appetite; genuine German bratwurst and knockwurst, cold beer, wine and soft drinks. On Saturday, homemade German pastries and kuchen, served by lovely ladies in their native dirndls, will be available to delight all those lovers of things sweet and tasty.

The Oktoberfest was first celebrated in Munich over 150 years ago when King Ludwig I invited is subjects to the festivities of his wedding. It has since become an annual affair at which the local breweries compete with one another for the attention and business of the celebrants by brightly decorating their tents and their horse-drawn beer wagons and by inviting patrons to set aside time, and perhaps principles, to eat, drink and be merry. The popularity of this event has spread to many parts of the world. Immigrants brought it to North America where Oktoberfests are now celebrated in many communities coast to coast.

The German-American Club of the North Shore was established nearly seven years ago to bring together people from the area north of Boston for pleasure, recreation and for the promotion of a better understanding and appreciation of German language and culture. Today the membership numbers about 200 people of all ages and backgrounds. Its newsletter. MACH MIT, reaches about 500 readers monthly.

Woodchips.....

By ANTHONY MANCONI

I never ask a person if she or he is Irish, Italian, French, etc. I personally don't care because I consider each and every one of us flowers in this gigantic garden called "The World." Each contributing its distinctive color, aroma and bouquet. But, there are thorns here and there we can't ignore. We must not let them deter us from enjoying the beauty in this great big beautiful world of ours.

I visited a friend in Reading last week and inquired about the beautiful plant on the porch. "Is that from the 'Bigonia family,' I asked?" "Yes," he offered, "they have gone to the Cape for the summer and I'm taking care of it."

A friend from Lynnfield is a retired electrician. He was told this is the time of the year to plant bulbs - so he put in some 100, 75, and 50 watters. I'm sure he won't get any tulips from them but he will have the brightest garden in the area.

That reminds me of the time I asked the beautiful Mary O'Brien from Stoneham, if she liked flowers? "Oh!" she exclaimed, "Indeed I do." "Good," I answered, "Here are "two-lips" you can have." Well she gave me a big "Smack," then I had three lips for anyone to have."

My wife ran off with my best friend and I miss him. She told me she was a fool when she married me - I told her I knew it but I married her anyway. I gave her credit, she tried to improve her cooking , she went to Culinary Arts School. You ought to see the beautiful marble cakes she baked. You can't eat them but you can see them on the patio floor we built with them. I won't say she not a beauty but a peeping Tom reached in and pulled the shade down last night.

At the Woburn Elks last night, Leo the waiter asked me if either of my parents were weight lifters. "No," I answered, "Why do you ask?" "Because they sure raised a dumb-bell."

Tom Mooney, the friendly Mailman from Winchester always looks sharp. And why not, he wears "Arrow Shirts". All cars will eventually have only one plate except dentists whose cars will have two, an Upper and Lower plate.

Bob Bergeron, worked for the Boston and Maine railroad as a guest "conductor," it took a lot of "training". One day a passenger said, "My face is my ticket." "Good," said Bob, I have orders to Punch all tickets."

When Michaelangelo painted the Sistine Chapel Ceiling he rented the scaffolding from Bill Lennon from Woburn. After four years of painting on his back the staging was returned, the drop-clothes removed and the floor washed. The Pope, who, with his assistants, marveled at the beautiful work of four long years, turned to Michaelangelo and asked, "Confidentially, Angelo, don't you think it needs another coat?"

This is for the young at heart, I hope you're one of them. "O-HI-O, why did DELLA-WARE a NEW JERSEY? I -DA-HO but "AL-ASK-A.

"Abyssinia."

Know Poison Ivy

Each year many children and adults are accidentally poisoned by contact with plants in Eastern Massachusetts. Poison Ivy is the most common offender. Contact with this vine or shrub causes severe skin inflammation and water blisters.; Few people have a natural immunity to protect them from poison ivy, and many do not recognize the plant so they can avoid it.

Ivy poisoning is largely preventable. Learning to identify poison ivy in its various forms is easy for anyone who will study pictures and general descriptions of the plant. It can be either a vine or low shrub, having shiny, dark green leaves in groups of three. The plant produces clusters of tiny flowers along the main stem, which become dense clusters of white berries in the early fall. The leaves become bright yellow or orange in the fall after the first hard frost.

If you have plants on your home grounds which you cannot identify but suspect could be poison ivy, send a few leaves, (wrapped in wax paper or aluminum foil and labelled "possible poison ivy") to the Middlesex County Extension Service, Agriculture Dept., 105 Everett Street, Concord, Ma. 01742.

Learn to recognize poison ivy this season. The easiest way to prevent ivy poisoning is to know the plant, and avoid contact with it!

the red box. The alarm sounded, but there was an obvious catch-22 that struck me, and I'm sure everybody else: with all that fire alarm testing going on throughout the hotel, who was going to believe there was an actual fire going on?

"Until someone tells us to evacuate the building, why don't we continue," said our instructor. "Security will take care of the fire." No one seemed to feel comfortable with that idea.

Outside the flames had lept to threatening proportions, slapping repeatedly against the clean red bricks. Several minutes passed; apparently security realized there was a major fire next to the receiving area, because a small battery of people arrived carrying shiny metal fire extinguishers. They bombarded the fire with their short black hoses, but only succeeded in creating a bigger murky cloud.

Finally it dawned on somebody to drive the dumpster away from the building. Once that was accomplished, the fire was eventually brought under control. When security was satisfied that the fire was extinguished, the smoldering dumpster was backed up to the platform again. A crowd had gathered on the platform and they were bantering jovially to ease their nervous tension.

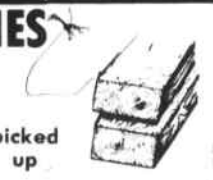

Meanwhile inside the cafeteria, everyone returned their attention to our instructor's easel. Well, most of their attention. The fire alarm was being tested again, but from then on we were not taking it so casually.

Thunderbirds don't disappoint fans

By John Alabiso

BEDFORD — They couldn't just land like regular pilots, they must have felt that they had to show off for all the people who had stayed late to greet them when they arrived two days before the performance. They were coming in after a three hour and 10 minute flight from Cheyenne, Wyoming, and would land as if one would pull into their driveway after a trip down to Cape Cod. So, after circling around the base, the Thunderbirds roared overhead in their red, white, and blue F-16 Falcons drowning out the cheers of the people below.

The Thunderbirds, which are the US Air Force's Air Demonstration Squadron, appeared at the Air Force Base (AFB) at Hanscom Field recently for entertainment and to give people a look at what the Air Force has and what they can do with it.

Included in the day's numerous festivities were two army bands, an army drill team, local minuteman companies, a precision motorcycle team, sentry dog demonstrations from the State Police and Pease AFB, a parachute team from Fort Devens, ground display aircraft, and military and industrial exhibits from the Electronic Systems Division. All this in celebration of the bicentennial of flight.

However, many came to see what 20 million are expected to see this year, the high flying Thunderbirds who could be heard for miles around.

The Thunderbirds, led by Major James D. Latham of shawnee Mission, Kansas, gracefully whizzed through the sky performing precision aerobatic manuevers to the delight of the crowd below.

According to Major Lawrence Stellmon, the most difficult manuever is the bomburst in which they fly up in formation and then split off doing a 360 degree turn before returning back to the original formation that they were in. Stellmon explained that it was difficult because at one point during the manuever, the jets are coming directly at each other and the timing has to be precision perfect in order for them to pull out of the chicken run.

Stellmon flies the slot position for the team which is the jet on the inside of the six jet formation behind the leader. "The jet is fantastically manueverable," said Stellmon who hails from Hot Springs, Montana.

The Falcon would have to have such instantaneous mobility for the Thunderbirds who demand so much from their aircraft while flying high in the blue yonder. In fact, in nearly 2500 air shows, the Thunderbirds have never had to cancel a performance due to maintenance problems.

However, there have been crashes. The most recent was January's crash of four jets in which four pilots died. As tragic as it was, Stellmon said, "The loss of four good friends is tough but we feel they would want us ... continue." He then compared it to a car accident saying that if four friends were killed, one would feel terrible but would still drive.

January's crash, and others, were due to mis-timing which is why Thunderbird pilots practice twice a day, six times per week while training from December to March. Stellmon said that the training period gets new pilots "working together" with current pilots in order that a sense of trust can be developed when they perform together.

But requirements to become a Thunderbird are stern due to the quality needed while performing in the air. In order for an air force pilot to become a Thunderbird, his application must be hand-picked from the many special-duty applications submitted before undergoing a screening.

And if a hot pilot with 1,000 flying hours or more gets picked from the pile, he then has his flying background and experience closely scrutinized by the current Thunderbird pilots.

From that point, the applicant would head off to Nellis AFB near Las Vegas, the home of the flight showmen since 1956, and fly in formation with the Thunderbirds so that his airmanship could be observed.

After such flying, recommendations are made to a board of Thunderbird senior officers before going for final approval to the commander of the Air Tactical Command.

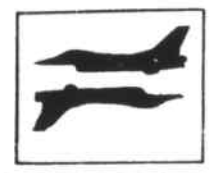

If selected after going through the vigorous procedures, the pilot will go into the december to March training period before finally before zipping through the sky in the Air Force's newest aircraft in a performance for a civilian audience.

And that newest aircraft that they use is the Falcon which is the eigth jet flown by the team. The first of which was the F-84G Thunderjet in 1953 to last year's T-38A. The sleek F-16 Falcon currently used is a multirole combat fighter.

The bird is nearly 50 feet long and can move at a speed of Mach 2 plus. That's more than twice the speed of sound (2,176 miles per hour at 32 degrees fahrenheit). It is propelled by 25,000 pounds of thrust from its turbofan engine which is slightly more than the weight of the aircraft when it is fully fueled and has minimal ammunition capabilites.

However, the Falcon is not the fastest in the world even though it is one of the latest electronic wonders of the miliary. In fact, a lot of the work and electronics were developed at Hanscom. So, in effect, the air show was a kind of homecoming for the Thunderbirds.

And there will be many more homecomings for the Thunderbirds as they tour approximately 70 different bases in performances.

Investment counselor advises Retired Men's Club

The July 27 meeting of Wakefield Retired Men featured Thomas E. Lovell, Investment Counselor in Reading. Introduced by President-elect Ralph Wentzel, Mr. Lovell asked, "How many were here on my visit three years ago?" Seeing many hands raised, he commented, "I'll try to give you something new and current." For instance, some good news, 'The recession is over'! At least that's the word from Wall Street pundits, who claim that the Market is dull. They see some signs of progress. Inflation is low and no segment of the public is affected by inflation more than the elderly retiree. When it is high, you can find yourself broke without having done anything at all.

The bad news is that unemployment remains high. This is true among the blue collar worker and industry in general. The work-force has shifted to information and communication systems of hi-tech, etc. You can't change progress, only try to understand it and that takes patience and forbearance. Mr. Lovell spoke about huge government deficits. "I've always had a problem with that thinking and still do," he said. As each new President takes office, he seems to have some special named program to set things right and get the Country moving again. The result? You guessed it, bigger and bigger deficits and a giant headache for the next administration.

Anent monetary concerns, i.e. foreign debts of World Wars I and II; the International Monetary Fund; FDIC; the Nations Major Banks, etc. Mr. Lovell deftly and succinctly tied them together. We should be concerned, as they affect us all, one way or another. He is of the opinion that inflation (while simmering at the moment) is under control, but will rise before long.

All of the above, plus other comment, laid the groundwork for his main topic, 'Financial Planning'. The basic approach in three easy steps; organize assets and liabilities; plan a strategy; set up a plan for investing. People spend lifetimes gainfully employed, pay their bills, save what they can, but never give a thought to actual financial worth. Mr. Lovell spoke at length on Social Security; pensions and debt-free real estate, as potential investment sources. His advice to retirees, invest wisely and safely. Diversification is the key to a sound investment strategy. Mr. Lovell touched many facets of finance, which accounted for the few questions put to him at the end of a most helpful and interesting talk.

President Tom Coughlan opened the meeting at 9:45 by observing the time honored ritual. The 247 attendees on a hazy, hot and humid July morning, included visitors; William McGinley, Melrose and Steve Procurot, Reading. One new member was inducted, Kenneth G. Horton, Reading.

Activities chairman, Henry Murphy reported on his special interests and covered for Trips director, Bob Sproul, absent due to prior commitment. Vice-president Les Merrifield read the birthday list and eleven were 'greeted' and presented a club pen by V.P. Wentzel. This added touch was instituted after the 20th anniversary, September 1982. Bandleader Chester Card (88 years young) reported for a very busy band. Recently, they gave four concerts in ten days. John Griffin's Sick and Visitation reports continue to be first rate. The Club was shocked and saddened to learn of the passing of five members since July 10. A moment of silence was observed in their memory.

Past-president George Flewelling drew many names for the door-prize, before he called one that was present, Malcolm Choate, Reading. Bob Francis appears to have picked up the title of 'story teller' from Lorrie Stockwell who has a voice problem.

President Coughlan read a note of thanks from Ruth Seavey and daughter Barbara Seavey Stepp, for the Club's gift to the American Cancer Society in memory of Past-president Erwin 'Gus' Seavey.

Paul 'thought for the day' Richmond being absent, the president read the following supplied by member Fred A. Greenwood, Arlington:

People come into our lives and walk with us a mile
And then because of circumstance, they only stay awhile.
They serve a need within the days, that pass so quickly by
And then are gone beyond our reach, we often wonder why.
God only knows the reason why we met and shared a smile,
Why people come into our lives and walk with us a mile.

Take care of your pets!

WOULD YOU PUT YOUR DOG IN THE OVEN AND TURN ON THE HEAT? If not, why leave him in a parked car? The Animal Rescue League of Boston reminds pet owners that any vehicle parked in the hot sun can become an "oven" for your pet and the temperature can exceed 100 degrees in a matter of minutes ... even with the windows slightly open. Prevent heat stroke by leaving your pet at home in the hot summer months. If he must be outside, make sure he is in an area that will stay shady, and have plenty of fresh water available at all times. If you would like to have some free flyers to carry with you to place under the windshield wipers of cars containing unattended hot pets, just send a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope to: Hot Dog, Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265, Boston, Mass. 02117

Employment growth important to the region

Employment in business services has grown more rapidly than in high tech manufacturing despite the widespread attention the latter commands, according to an article in the latest issue of the New England Economic Review published by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. The author of the article, Lynn E. Browne, Vice President and Economist at the Bank, points out that the two are interrelated with the most rapidly expanding business services reflecting growth in high tech manufacturing. She also notes that both computer services and management consulting are likely to be less vulnerable to foreign competition than many manufacturing activities both because of their market orientation than many manufacturing activities both because of their market orientation and their detailed knowledge of American business practices. The growth of the service industry provides evidence of the varied nature of industrial development and is a powerful argument in favor of creating an environment conducive to innovation rather than targeting assistance to specific industries, the author says.

Older population book

One out of eight persons in Massachusetts is over 65. Of these, 29 percent live alone. Want to know more? The Center of Massachusetts Data has recently published a reference volume of data on our older population, called "Over 65 in Massachusetts". Based on 1980 census data, the 200-page book is a collaboration of the Center for Massachusetts Data and the Center on Aging at UMass-Amherst.

"Over 65 in Massachusetts" contains 160 pages of tables in all of the available statistics from the 1980 census for the older population: age, race, sex, marital status, presence of disability, household composition, poverty status, etc. Data is presented at the city and town level, grouped by Area Agency on Aging (though a city and town index is included for those unfamiliar with Area Agencies on Aging).; The book also contains a state summary highlighting trends between 1970 and 1980, a description of data found in the tables and a glossary of terms and directory of Area Agencies on Aging. Computer maps illustrating such characteristics as the distribution of minorities and percent living alone are included as well.

"Over 65 in Massachusetts" is $4 per copy, which includes postage. Make checks payable to Center for Massachusetts Data Account No. 1-20050; mail to Center for Massachusetts Data, 117 Draper Hall, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Ma. 01003.

New England spending higher than most

Large New England cities and towns spend about twice as much per capita as cities of comparable size in the nation as a whole, according to Katharine Bradbury, Economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. Writing in the latest issue of the Bank's New England Economic Review, Ms. Bradbury points out that the most important reason for the higher spending of the region's cities is differences in financing local public schools. Most cities in other parts of the country do not directly finance local public schools. The striking differences between the municipal role in New England and other states raise the question of whether the New England states should change that role and if so, how.

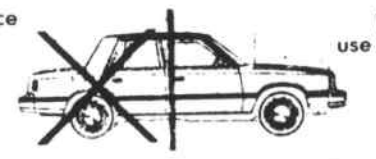

The structural imbalance between city and town responsibilities and revenue sources leads to high property taxes and large interlocal tax and service disparities. The author suggests that policy actions by state governments could reduce some of these difficulties. Three possible approaches — service takeover, more aid and local option taxes — should be carefully balanced and examined in the light of each state's specific situation, the author says.

Ask Your Pharmacist

HOW'S YOUR ALLERGY AWARENESS?

Your pharmacist can recommend products that best meet your individual needs.

It's estimated by some medical authorities that as many as one in five people suffer from an allergy.

Respiratory allergy sufferers, like many allergy-causing pollens, come in all kinds and sizes. Fortunately, so do allergy relief medications.

How do you tell if you have an allergy? One sign is the recurrent development of symptoms associated with distinct factors in the environment. If a change of seasons, location, job, diet or habits brings on the condition or makes it go away, you've probably got an allergy.

What are the symptoms? Hay fever, the most common form of allergy, is characterized by sneezing, stuffed-up or runny nose, itching and watery eyes and excessive mucus in the nose and throat. Any or all of these symptoms, appearing in conjunction with a change of seasons or unusual exposure to the outdoors, may indicate hay fever.

The only way to know for sure if you are allergic to pollens is to consult your physician. Tell him the history of your symptoms.

It's also a good idea to ask your pharmacist. When nasal stuffiness accompanies sneezing, itching and weeping, a combination of antihistamine/decongestant remedy may be needed, such as Chlor-Trimeton®. This is especially true if stuffiness causes severe discomfort or interferes with sleep.

To make it easier for you to choose the best relief during allergy season, write for a free "Allergy Rule" to: Schering Corporation, 1133 Avenue of the Americas, 15th floor; New York, NY 10036. The "Allergy Rule" combined with your pharmacist's recommendation can enhance your allergy awareness.

A garden kingdom

Coming Attractions

By William Pacino

The results of several months of labor has come to fruition and gardens everywhere are yielding up tasty vegetables and fruits. Take advantage of this time of the season and delight in the fresh varieties of locally grown food available to you.

When it comes to food for the month of August, fresh native "corn on the cob" is an all-time favorite across the Bay State.

It's the start of the peak harvest season at local farms, and other produce items plentiful at farm stands and markets are ripe red juicy tomatoes, eggplant, fresh potatoes, carrots, shell beans, cucumbers, cabbage, lettuces, squashes, beets and greens.

More land has been planted with sweet corn this summer in Massachusetss, according to the state Food and Agriculture Department, with 8,600 acres to be harvested, an increase of 900 acres over the 1982 season. The continued dry soil conditions are not helping the corn, however, and most crops are showing the effects of lack of sufficient rain.

In fresh native fruit, sweet juicy blueberries are in season, and the harvest of early apple varieties has just begun. The cranberry crops are in blossom, and the crop promises to be good and large in size.

Our own garden this year has been quite different from that of other year's. The vegetables planted have been the same, but the speed of growing and what the garden looks like this time around is something new to us. The rainy spring contributed to a slow beginning but all the heat in July (a record) has the garden looking like wall-to-wall vegetables.

We started the Green Knight and Victory Hybrid cucumbers from Burpee Seed Co. seeds and we have had our best production ever. In the past, our cucumbers would get to a certain point and then fade and wilt quickly because of something (an insect of some sort) in the soil. But this year, the cucumbers are holding their own. We had excellent results with the "burp-less" variety.

The bush green beans, called Provider from Johnny's Seeds in Albion, Maine, have come and gone and we are preparing to plant a second crop that hopefully we can harvest before the fall frost. This year the beans grew very tall, but wouldn't you know it, the beans were at their peak while we were away on vacation. The lettuce, Green Ice (native) and Paris White (Romaine) from Burpee was quite plentiful but it went to seed quickly under the hot July sun. It is gone for this summer, but we were taking out lettuce by the grocery bag full when it was at its peak.

The next row in the garden is jammed with Burpee Hybrid Zucchini Squash. We did not thin the plants like Jim Crockett tells you in his "Victory Garden" book, so we have a mass of flowering plants. So far, we have realized only three good-size zucchinis from the garden, but we anticipate more.

The Yolo Wonder peppers, bought in flats, are doing well. The smallest plant right now is the one with the best looking peppers. Peppers have been consistently good growers in our garden over the years.

We are getting around to a second planting of Sugar Snap peas. The first batch, steamed, brightened many a meal in the middle and late part of June. The pea fence we make the peas climb in order to save space in the garden needs some work. However, it will be hard to do anything with it because the pea vines become so entangled in it. We also forced the cukes to climb a fence in order to get a little more usefulness out of small backyard garden.

Finally we come to the pride and joy of the garden – the tomatoes. We bought two new varieties this year, Burpee VF and Better Girl in flats. We have to have plants that are disease resistant because of the soil and the insects that inhabit it where we live.

So far things look good, we have a good many good-size green tomatoes on the vine. We have topped off the plants so they push all their power into the tomato fruit and not into growing more leaves.

Garden tips

Among the joys of August are luscious, sweet, home-grown tomatoes. With care, you can extend this enjoyment well into the fall.

Tomatoes will stay ripe on the vine only two or three days before beginning to decay. If you can not harvest them at the right moment, "Country Journal" magazine suggests you pick them as early as possible and then ripen them over the next few months.

First, ripen some indoors at temperatures between 60 and 72 degrees. Put them in a north, not south window.

Then store other green tomatoes for later use by wrapping them individually in newspaper. If you keep them at 55 degrees they will last longer. In some cases it makes sense to pull up the entire vine and hang it right side up where temperatures are 55 to 72 degrees. You will have lots of ripe tomatoes after the vines have withered.

Another tip from "Country Journal" is based on eating the flowers. This daring idea should jazz up just about any dish. Don't toss just any flowers into your salad, some like foxglove and lily of the valley are poisonous.

Instead, try squash and pumpkin blossoms. They can even be dipped into batter and fried like a fritter. Nasturtium blossoms are a peppery addition to any salad. And day lily buds, steamed and buttered, are delicious.

The blossoms or leaves from your violets are tangy and colorful in the salad bowl, but they are a great source of Vitamin C.

Local theater

The Colonial Chorus of Reading announces open auditions for their fall production, the Gershwins' "Girl Crazy". The excitement commences at 7:30 PM on Wednesday and Thursday, August 17 and 18, at the Old Hose House, 1249 North Main St., Reading.

Barbara Kerrigan of Woburn (933-7247) and Phyllis Evensen of Reading (944-6458) will provide perusal scripts and additional information.

Pro Wrestling

On Sunday, August 21, the World Wrestling Federation is going to make an appearance at the Acton/ Boxboro Regional High School Gym. It will be a benefit event for the Acton Police Union.

In the main event, the legendary Chief Jay Strongbow will do battle with Sgt. Slaughter, in a one fall, one hour time limit contest. Also, sensational Rocky Johnson does battle with the Wild Samoan.

Completing the card, Salvatore Bellomo faces Tiger Chung Lee, the Invaders oppose Don Kernodle and Butcher Vachon, and S.D. Jones takes on Iron Mike Sharpe.

All of the action gets underway at 8 PM, and advance tickets, priced at $7 (ringside reserved) and $5 (general admission), are on sale at the following locations: In Acton, Actonian Restaurant, Sandwich Board, and Colonial Spirits. Also, in West Acton, purchase tickets at Nashua Valley Travel.

From enjoying the fruit of your gardening labor to adding a bit of flower to your salad, from shucking corn to yelling at your favorite bad guy, COMING ATTRACTIONS has something for everyone. But don't let us stop here. If you know of any event of interest to all, write, care of this local newspaper, and tell us all about it. As you can see, we're ready for anything.

Swimmers invited

Plans are underway for the fourth annual Leukemia "Super Swim Classic" sponsored by the Leukemia Society of America and Child World Stores, to be held during the week of August 21-27.

The swim is a public fund raiser in which each swimmer "wagers" ability and fitness against the pledges of sponsors. Ten area pools are participating in the swim including the Holiday Inns in Brockton, Woburn, Peabody, and Dedham.

For full details contact Wendy Goldberg at Swim Headquarters, c-o Leukemia Society, 31 St. James Avenue, Boston, or call 482-2289.
